This historic book may have numerous typos, missing text or index. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. 1846. Not illustrated. Excerpt: ... by inordinate love of baksheesh, and, skipping like chamois on a mountain, unencumbered. with any garment expressible or inexpressible, were resolutely bent on lifting, dragging, and shoving us up the steep, after a fashion which was anything but dignified, though doubtless very safe. Two little blue-robed bare-footed damsels, with porous earthen pitchers of delicious water from the Nile, were far more gentle and welcome auxiliaries, and the "baksheesh," modestly murmured and fairly earned, was an appeal from the gazelle-eyed maidens too just and powerful to be resisted. Pausing half way on the tremendous slope, we looked up and looked down on the piled mountain above and below us with a feeling of awe approaching to dread, though the footing is broad enough to ensure safety to any one not cursed with a very topsy-turvy imagination; but here we shudder at the thought of the Englishman, who missing his hold on the first step, fell and rolled and bounded, a bloody, bruised, and broken mummy, down that Brobdignagian staircase. This of course is a grand story for the guides, and, whether true or not, produces its impression then and there; his friend saw. him stumble, caught the last glare of agony from his starting eye-balls, and heard the shriek of despair as the clutched fingers grasped and lost their hold upon the stone. An order has since been issued, that no stranger shall climb the pyramids unattended by Arab guides. Reaching the summit of the pyramid, we throw ourselves on its rugged pavement, hot, thirsty, and breathless, after a neck and neck race up the last hundred steps, each nearly a yard high; but the dewy pitcher is at hand, we drink a deep cold draught of the Nile's sweet water, inhale the fresh elastic breeze of the desert, five hundred feet above ...
